

MEDIA RELEASE FOR ELITE SIMULATION SOLUTIONS AG

ELITE USA officially launches its flight simulator themed podcast

ELITE Simulation Solutions (www.flyelite.com) will officially launch its flight simulator themed podcast on the ELITE website October 1st, 2007. ELITE will feature some of the most exciting simulator news, tech-talk, and aviation discussion boards ELITE has to offer. Interviews with industry movers and shakers, pilots, instructors and simulator hobbyists will be featured on a regular basis. In early 2008 ELITE customers and users will be able to call in and ask questions over live internet radio. Other topics will include computer-based flight training simulation programs such as ELITE, Microsoft Flight Simulator X and others. Starting in early 2008 ELITE customers and end-users from around the world will be able to call in and participate in the podcast forums

Studies show Internet use is climbing at an annualized rate of 18 percent and now has one billion users. According to Dr. Jakob Nielsen, one of the world's foremost experts in Web usability, another billion users are expected to follow in the next 10 years. ELITE Simulation Solutions is tapping into this trend while allowing aviation enthusiasts, pilots and ELITE end-users interested in the simulation industry to see and hear what is going on in the aviation industry and to stay on top of current trends.

As broadband connections have increased, statistics show more Internet users are looking for video and music files. Video sites such as www.YouTube.com are seen as some of the hottest properties on the Web.

According to Nielsen/NetRatings, approximately 9 million U.S. Web users or 6.6 percent of the American adult online population have recently downloaded an audio podcast.

The ELITE podcasts will be available for download at the ELITE website ELITE and at the Apple iTunes website iTunes. ELITE podcasts may be saved to your personal media player or iPod.
